"The mosaic...supports the Porter College community because it shows diversity, even within the Arts. It shows the several ways art can be construed: Visual, writing, film, music, and theatre. All of the colors show the differences between Porter Students, and the mosaic feel of it all shows how the all fit together to make what is the 'Spirt of Porter'".

Jesus Zuniga (A1), mural completed 2011

For this mural I tried to incorporate images that are representative of the culture of Porter College. The first panel includes images of banana slugs and a deer: The UC's (UCSC) mascot and one of the most common animals seen around campus. The deer is made of plants* to emphasize the nature around campus and because deer are symbolic of freedom which is noticeable in Porter. The second panel is an image of the Porter Squiggle, the college's most popular art piece. It's become a symbol of the uniqueness that is always present in Porter. The bridge is the path that leads to the world; just as Porter's community helps us reach the full potential of our creativity. The College's motto, written across a ribbon of color further supports this idea. The arts do not only apply to the Fine Arts, but to any work that requires technical skill. The third panel honors the college's Koi fish from one of the colleges more popular places. The dream-catchers are an archaic symbol of unity used not only for one tribe, but within different tribes of Native Americans, just as Porter embraces diversity.

"I feel that my work is very representative of Porter College's physical environment as well as being [a] reflection of the uniqueness of Porter Students. My proposed mural's unusual style demonstrates the individuality shown by Porter students. It also includes many attributes of Porter College, such as the squiggle ["untitled" Kenny Farrel, 1974], the college motto stemming from the roots of a tree, and a deer. The mural would bring diversity to Porter College and reflect the unique, forward-thinking student population.

Steven Paul Lewis (C1), mural completed 2012

"I hve chosen to submit an image from a dream. Not purely surreal, but born as much from my academic experience as from any other, it provided the inspiration to look at a mathematical concept in a new light, and thus deepen my understanding. It is my hope to convey the potential that exists in all our minds, to divine the abstract, the subtle and the complex, when the text and discourse fail us.

My Dream occurred one night after a lecture in calculus. We were on the concepts of flux (often denoted with the Greek letter, (Phi), and it was going over my head. I was told it was like water rushing through a pipe, or light shining through a window, and while I was able to gather that flux was a measure of something through something else, I was lost on how to define that something else. Instruction told me that it was a surface, which didn't help. I tended to think of surfaces as physical barriers -- things you didn't pass through.

In my dream, I was outside, at night, in the freezing cold, following the blurry figure as it moved spritely across the train, apparently immune from the dismal weather. It struck this odd pose, raising up its appendages and turning itself towards a dim light in the sky. It seemed to be waiting for me. I mimicked the odd little pose, faced the light, and waved my arms in the air, to no effect. Then I clasped my hands, forming a loop over my head, and instantly, the light intensified, and I cold feel warmth and vitality spreading from my arms to the rest of my body.

After I wake, I realized what this figure had shown me was how to create a surface. The light in my dream had had some potential that existed everywhere it shown, but only took effect if you could measure its flux. You had to create a loop for that light to pass through -- a surface, defined by its bounds, your arms.

The missing piece as provided to my by this strange figure, whom I have bought into focus, on the grassy hills reminiscent of those to the South of our college, capturing the light of the moon.

"The mural begins win the bottom right corner where we see the Porter Squiggle tattooed to the wrist of an enormous hand; the hand is the creative potential of Porter students, ready and eager to reach out and take hold of the world. The hand (Blue with yellowish finger nails to represent our school colors) reaches out and takes hold of the Earth, thus creating a white void at the center of the piece. This space represents the canvas created by our education here at Porter, upon which we may build a masterpiece through our art. The hand squeezes the Earth, which bursts the red of the Porter Squiggle from its geographic location on the Earth. As it reaches into space, it begins to branch out into various colors to show how our influence, as citizens of the universe, will ripple and spread through time and bring out the true colors of the world. The burst of color moves outward and onward to represent our school's motto that although life on Earth remains short, our art will go on forever. The burst also encircles Venus, the god of love and prosperity, to show that Porter students aim toward worldly love and peace as well as successfulness, and avoid the lonesome Mars, god of war. Alternatively, the many colors of the burst may represent the diversity of Porter's student body, and the variety ou our art.

This piece as a whole provides an artistic portrayal of how Porter students take the hold of the world with ambition, art, and education, and use it as a prism through which they may produce progress, peace, and prosperity throughout time and space. It shines as a reminder that we are the mighty hand by which the world may fill the universe with progress, art, and beauty.

"Through this mural I hope to convey a sense of community and uniqueness. The mural encompasses the surrounding hills and ocean area of Santa Cruz. I chose to depict the hills in various colors and patterns to represent the different personalities and characteristics on campus and in the community. The Porter Squiggle represents the pride of the Porter Community and UCSC. The other landmarks represent other important features of the Santa Cruz environment. I chose autumn colors to bolster a feeling of family and spiritual wealth, for all the students at UCSC can harvest knowledge and love from the Community and fellow students.

Marcy Ramirez (C2), mural completed 2014

"The marine environment has been a part of the Santa Cruz and Monterey Culture. We over look the Bay whenever we pass by the squiggle and this mural would give the Porter Community a visualization of what Santa Cruz has in its oceans. I feel that the work presented would honor the community who study Biology, Ecology, Marine Biology and Environmental Studies [and] at the same time give others who don't, an appreciation of the marine life diversity Santa Cruz offers

Taylor Chase & Sabrina Mohler (A7), mural completed 2015

"When I originally drew this design, which I then choose to submit for a mural, I was thinking of the dying connection between society and nature. The image depicts a small child of the earth - a sort of mushroom fairy with a prince of the trees. I believed this piece of art would blend in well with the Porter community because of the student's active search to reconnect with nature and the environment around them. I also feel it fits because of its whimsicality. Porter supports the Arts, creativity, and self-expression, and the connection of nature and creativity within the piece, to me, represents what I seek in Porter: a place where the inner child is nurtured and self-expression manifests with community encouragement

"We have chosen to represent some common plant and animal species that share the local Porter and larger UCSC community with us. In the same way that it is important that we know each other's names, this mural teaches us the names of some of these species.

It is our hope that this mural provides an awareness and understanding of the physical context of our intellectual, emotional, and spiritual development as a community.

We intentionally planned to start this project at the opening of the academic year to foster interest in the core value of Porter College: to create enduring art and creative expression. Our hope is that by modeling the process for our students, we will build interest in.

Irene Valencia (A) mural Completed 2016

My mural called "Under the Sea" will not only enhance the beauty of Porter College, but will also promote diversity of the arts. This mural depicts an image of a fisherman in the process of capturing a massive octopus. I chose an octopus to represent ourselves as "liberated" creatures as an octopus displays "human-like" tendencies such as protection of food, intellectual abilities, and impressive memory retention skills. Whereas, the fisherman portrays "power". The entirety of the image addresses the issue of "control" versus "freedom". By this logic, individuals can break free from restraining forces (internal, external, etc.) through self-determination and community support. As students, we are powerful forces capable of overcoming many obstacles, but I tis how we approach every situation that will contribute to our well-being. As a result of upholding a set of values and beliefs, true to themselves, people can rise above their struggles to achieve greatness. I seek to share my "under the sea" mural as a reminder that we are much more powerful than we allow ourselves to be.

Being able to express my creativity through this piece reinforces my passion for art and for the greater good of my academic journey. It would be a privilege to immerse my work at Porter not only because it's an exceptional opportunity but I know it will be located in a community dedicated to the arts just as much as I am.

Charmaine Mills (B9 A - F) mural Completed 2017

This work depicts UCSC's mascot, the banana slug, but in a different light than what I have usually seen it in, often the banana slug is drawn as a cartoon character, and by adding in the details of the banana slug, the Porter community and its visitors can appreciate the mascot in a larger, more detailed dimension. This work would enhance the community by making the college more aesthetically pleasing and more connected to art.

This concept is sort of a parody of my experience with Porter. I came here expecting to meet a lot of artists, but most of the friends I made are stem majors, and/or stoners. That is represented by the desperate students appealing to a forest god (a chimera of slug, deer, turkey and raven - the animals I associate most w/ this school) to get through her assignments in one piece. I set the scene in front of the squiggle (bc Poooorterrrr), but the forest god is mostly inspired by my many mini-adventures through the woods and meadows across campus, finding lost trinkets and fairy rings and wildlife. It's not hard to imagine running into magical creatures around here! I just hope a few people get a chuckle out of this hypothetical mural, or think it captures the local view of the sunset nicely, at least.

Irene Le (B13) mural completed 2019

This piece aims to submerge audiences within the modern moment through a remembrance of a nostalgic child-like melancholy of memories once natural, simply taken away, now missing. Where has it gone? Why did it go? If we try, will it ever come back?

Benjamin Wang Balchunas (C3) mural completed 2019

I painted Dr. Angela Davis not only because of her significant affiliation with the University of California, Santa Cruz, but also because of the fire and spirit that she represents. With a president that is endorsed by openly white supremacist groups living in the White House, with racial tensions on the rise in this country, I think it is important for the UCSC Community to recognize its own history, and pay tribute to the people who made this school what it is. There is a reason that Angela Davis is such an Iconic figure - the work that she has done benefits not only black communities, but the communities of all ethnic minorities in this country (as well as white working class folks).

As an art major who has already passed extensive portfolio reviews to be where I am at today, I feel that the Porter community's murals don't necessarily reflect what I would like to see in a university setting. We take classes that overwhelm us with how fucked up the world is but don't offer meaningful solutions. I hope that this mural can remind others that positive change is an uphill battle, but that in time and effort it can come. In this way I hope that the mural can serve as a torch being passed down between generations, bridging time and sparting resilience.

If I have any particularly thing to say in this artist statement is this: I am a senior year art major who has worked hard to get here is about to graduate - I am not going to treat this mural as a weekend side-project, but as my chance to give something back.

Isabella Tuell (B11) mural painted during the pandemic year of 2020 - '21 when the Porter Community was, sadly, on-line and unable to participate in the creation of the mural as Bella had envisioned.

The idea of this work is that it is a community mural (so I would not be the only painter). The whales and design would be the same and done by me, however I want the Porter community to be included and allowed to participate in this painting because the most valuable thing in Porter is its vibrant and wonderful community.

The idea would be people would be allowed to come (under supervision of course) and paint a triangle—something they value in Porter, their hand print, name, flowers, lines, etc. — resulting in a mural that resembles a community quilt. I believe this would be a really fun activity and would bring the Porter community closer, and have all of our work immortalized in the best college!

"Animal Kingdom"

Porter & Our Campus as a whole are so unique because of the people & because of our location. Each day we are gifted with the wildlife seen in my piece & should never take for granted the value it has. The picture frames & crowns suggest that royalty is to be displayed on the wall, but here at Porter & UCSC we are loyal subject not to people, but to the wilderness we are so lucky to inhabit. My piece is meant to remind us who's King.

Cyrus Martinez - Weaver (B8) mural painted during the pandemic year of 2021 - '22.

Artist's Statement

For my mural submission, I want to make an art piece that is a simple but powerful statement about the natural environment our community lives in. Porter college in my mind has one of the nicest, most vibrant communities on campus to live with and is one of the coziest most beautiful places to live because of how close we are to nature. I think we all enjoy how aware of the environment this campus is, so much so that our mascot is the iconic banana slug that lives right in all of our backyards, rather than an animal we usually never see. The fact we are placed right in the middle of the beautiful coastal redwood forest of California is such a gift.

However, there is an unfortunate occurrence that I noticed. The mural idea I am submitting is an art piece I made based on something I witnessed in the forest not too long ago.

I walked steadily through the forest and landed myself and my picnic near a cold creek. But upon my arrival, I found quite a bit of trash floating along the river. That in itself was irritating to see but then there was something I saw that nearly broke my heart. Stuck in between the rocks, partially submerged was a salamander, red as fire, stuck in a closed glass jar. The jar itself was empty but the little critter was being thrashed around trying to find its footing. Ironically stuck his in element but never allowed to be in it. I grabbed it and released the little fella. But I saw the fear and confusion in its eyes. It inspired me to get out my watercolors and work on the picture which I am submitting.

I am all for picnics, exploration, and parties in the woods but I do not like to see the woods being treated as a personal trash can. I would like to, if I could, place the mural near one of the spots around the waste bins as a friendly reminder of why proper waste disposal is important. Of course, I do not want to guilt people and I certainly do not think it will stop littering on campus. I like to believe we all love animals on this campus. We all live in great tranquility with the animals and nature in Porter and it makes me very hopeful for our environmental future as humans. But I do also want to address that sometimes we do not see the effects we have on the creatures we care about. The mural would be my contribution to this wonderful community that I am a part of as a symbol to everyone to be kind to the wildlife and their home. Because it is our home too. I want to keep it nice. This is my way of doing it.

Sage Alucero (A2) Mural painted Apring '22 - Spring '23

Art is an offering to the creation energy of life. Art is a prayer, whether it be through painting, dancing, singing, laughing, art is a form of nourishment that humans can offer the Earth in reciprocal gratitude. That is the motivation for this piece titled "Offering."

In it a figure with brown skin, a shaved mohawk, tattoos and forms of body adornment is repeated in three different iterations representing the sea, the redwood forest, and a meadow of California wildflowers. Mushrooms are a representation of interconnection and unity with the land. The fungi in the foreground frame a quote by Potawatomi scientist and author, Robin Wall Kimmerer, it reads..."Joy is what the Earth gives me daily, I must return the favor."

It has been an honor and a transformative experience to live on Ohlone land these past few years and engage with Indigenous scholars. My spiritual journey has coincided with taking HAVC classes that have contextualized colonialism and its detrimental effects on our relationship with land. The combination of art, education, and immersion in nature has been energizing and has introduced me to community that is working creatively in support of Life & Creation Energy.

Through this mural I would like to encourage viewers to understand themselves as a part of nature and to engage with nature like an old friend. The auras of each figure connect with the land and ocean visible from Porter College. It is my hope to represent the Earth as entities that live and breathe among us, entities that we can speak to, dance with, pray with, and thank for holding us on our Earthly Journeys.
